

Bigfoot CMMS - Update Instructions

This document explains the periodic updates for your Bigfoot CMMS. Please follow these instructions carefully. You must be logged in as Administrator.

If you are running the software on a network, your database files are typically on a server and should not be affected. However, nobody should run the software until all stations have been updated.

Computer experts and Common Sense agree:
Do a backup before you upgrade any program.

Go to Web site: <http://www.bigfootcmms.com/support/update.asp>

1. Download (Save) the Bigfoot Update.exe to your computer. Do not run from the web site. (If your company uses the Request Utility, you will need to download/save that, too – it has its own instruction page, like the one you are reading.)
2. We recommend saving it to your desktop or a folder that you can locate easily.
3. Make sure that Bigfoot is closed on ALL stations. This goes for the Request Utility as well. Bigfoot should not be running any place until all of the stations are upgraded.
4. Using Windows Explorer or My Computer, navigate to the location where you saved the upgrade.
5. Double click Bigfoot Update.exe
6. Follow the instructions on the screen. In most cases, the default answers should suffice.
7. For the rest of the stations on the network, copy Bigfoot Update.exe to each station which is already using Bigfoot and execute on that station. You cannot administer the update to all machines while you are sitting at your PC, no matter how powerful your administrative privileges are. Some companies prefer to use a “thumb drive” (flash drive – about the size of a pack of gum) to transport the files among the PCs; if you do, make sure that you copy the programs from the thumb drive to the destination computer. The whole idea is that the executable upgrade must reside on the PC being upgraded. Put the file on the target computer, then pull the trigger (double click)!
